More choices, flexibility at UM

Major changes made with the University of Maryland's new course schedule will make it easier for watchstanders and people who have busy schedules to take college classes. The changes take affect when Maryland's Term One begins in late August.

The university has been taking a look at how they do business in Rota and they're making changes in hopes to provide people more opportunities to learn while they're in Rota.

"The base has changed. Its population has decreased and its deployment pattern has stepped up," said Michelle Boyer, field representative for the University. "So we saw the need to try new things to accommodate the changing needs and interests."

The biggest change will occur in class scheduling. Almost all classes at Maryland will only be available in one-hour 15 minute sessions held four nights weekly. Gone from the schedule are three-hour sessions held two nights weekly. "People are really busy, and to ask someone to be away for three hours is hard," said Boyer.

"The new schedule should allow more people, particularly watchstanders, an opportunity to attend classes," said Boyer. "With these one-hour 15 minute classes, supervisors might be able to let their people go to a class when they have watch."

The University expects that some students may not like the new schedule, but Boyer said reaction to the new schedule so far has been positive. She added that the new schedule does not restrict or take away anything from students used to the old schedule. The new schedule, though, does give people who couldn't take classes before an opportunity to find a class time convenient for their schedule.

"Now there are five class time slots available," said Boyer. Classes will now be offered at: 8 a.m.; Noon; 5:15 p.m.; 6:45 p.m.; and 8:15 p.m. All classes last one hour and 15 minutes.

Maryland has seven new teachers starting in Term One and will be offering courses for three new associates programs - Early Child Development, Criminal Justice and Emergency Medical Services.

Registration for Term One begins August 16. Classes run Aug. 30 to Oct. 15.

Rota readies for July 4th

Public Works Seabees and Marines here set up casetas and run power lines Tuesday for the 4th of July festivities. The assistance saved the 4th of July committee and the base more than $7,000, according to UTCSC(SCW) Vince Patton. See page 4 and 6.

Crime expected to increase during summer months

The NAVSTA Security department's Crime Prevention team is expecting a slight increase in vehicle break-ins and burglaries in the coming months. "The trend is it will increase," said YN2(SW) Brian Dembicky, Crime Prevention team member.

Security crime statistics show house break-ins climb to an average of 11 incidents a month during July, August and September. An average of five monthly break-ins occur the rest of the year.

Vehicle break-ins climb to an average of 14 break-ins a month in July, August and September. An average of 12 monthly break-ins occur the rest of the year.

"The main factor [for the increase] is a population increase [made up of tourists and transient summer crowds] in the

Gas coupon prices drop

Naval Station Supply Department will soon manage the gas coupons program at Rota, and lower the cost of them to $40 per 100 liters.

Gas coupons will still be issued through the NEX, but Supply will oversee the process, saving residents $20 per liter over prices several months ago.

Naval Station Supply Officer, Cmdr. Larry Arcement ensured the cost of gas is based on the break-even point for the NEX. "Naval Station wants to break even, and one way we can bring the break-even point even lower is to give [the NEX] one of my guys that can do the job," said Arcement. "We had an available supervisor at the Galley that is very good with inventory management that we are using at the NEX," said Arcement. He added that strong leadership and bilingual skills of the petty officers 1st class at the Galley helped free up some of the manpower needs there.

The transition will be nearly seamless for residents, added Arcement, as the systems the NEX currently uses will stay the same.

"The Exchange is still running the program - everything still happens over at the exchange - [Supply Department] just provides the expertise to operate the program."

VQ-2 Chief dies of bone cancer, base mourns

A VQ-2 chief died last Wednesday after a short, intense battle with a rare form of bone cancer. The cancer was noticed only six weeks prior to his death.

AWC(AW/SW) George Waller died at Walter Reed Medical Center near Washington, D.C. His wife and two children were flown to be by his side after their doctors notified them of his deteriorating condition.

Waller served with distinction at VQ-2, arriving in March of 1998 with an impressive list of accomplishments, built since enlisting in the Navy in 1980. He served as the Leading Chief Petty Officer for the N3 Operations Department.

Waller was always seeking to better himself through education, having attended numerous courses at several schools. He earned an A.S. in Business Administration at New Hampshire College, a B.S. in the same subject, as well as a B.S. in Computer Information Systems from Columbia College. He was enrolled in the Master's Program at the University of Maryland campus in Rota, working on Management of Information Systems at the time of his death.

Waller was very active and

Barracks evacuation drills to continue on monthly basis

Residents living in the barracks at the Naval Station may have noticed fire alarms sounding more often. Unannounced evacuation drills in all of the enlisted barracks are now being conducted randomly at least once a month, which have been done quarterly in the past.

"We have to increase the awareness and responsiveness of tenants living in the barracks," said Tony Athans, fire inspector, Naval Station, Rota, Spain. "Right now, we absolutely have a problem with responsiveness. Until we treat each fire drill as an actual fire, we will continue to do the drills on a monthly basis."

Athans said residents of the barracks are taking too long to evacuate the buildings during fire drills. "The building needs to be completely evacuated in a timely manner, and someone needs to take charge of the group that's outside the building."

The barracks currently don't have a central alarm system that automatically notifies the Fire Department (except Building 28) when an alarm goes off, said Athans, but all public buildings will eventually have automatic notification systems.

Currently, the Fire Department relies on the residents of the buildings to call them in case of an emergency, said Athans.

"If someone identifies a fire, the first thing they need to do is pull the fire alarm, then go immediately to a neighboring building and dial 911."

"The residents have to take the responsibility, just like if it was your own home," said Athans. "If more people treated [the barracks] like their home, we wouldn't have as much of a problem," he added.

Athans said the biggest problem is that people aren't taking the fire drills seriously. He added little progress has been made in increasing the responsiveness of barracks residents to fire alarms. "This is a requirement of the base to ensure that our residents are safe."

Cell phone use dangerous at gas station: base fire inspector

Fire inspectors and Safety officials at Naval Station, Rota, Spain, warn against the use of cellular phones at gas stations, anywhere smoking is not authorized and any area where there is combustible material.

Recently, a patron of a gas station in the States suffered burns associated with the use of a 'cell phone' at a gas station, according to Tony Athans, fire inspector, Naval Station, Rota, Spain.

Although it may be a rare occurrence, Athans said they are asking everyone at Naval Station, Rota, to refrain from using cellular phones in areas near combustible materials.

A message generated from the Fire Marshal's office in Norfolk, Va., stated "the threat mobile phones pose to gas stations and their users is primarily a result of the phone's ability to produce sparks that can be generated that can be generated by the high-powered battery attached to the phone."

Mobile phone manufacturers Motorola, Ericsson and Nokia all caution users against mobile phone use in "gas stations, fuel storage facilities and chemical factories."

Athans added that information is provided in the cellular phone handbook with specific warning information and cautions for cellular phone users.

Operational tempo increases at Port

Sailors at Rota's Port Operations department have been working at an increased operations tempo so far this year.

The Port Operations department has logged 468 ship-days so far this year and is on pace for a more than 900 ship-day year. The port usually handles 700 ship-days each year.

The increase in port calls and ship-days is mostly due to Sixth Fleet support of Kosovo operations. Work schedules at the port are directly tied to the fleet's operational commitments, and that has meant a lot of overtime for the nearly 20 Sailors at Port Operations.

"Our motto is 'We Work Weekends,'" said BMC(SW) John Palma, the port's harbor pilot. "Whenever the ships come in, we're there." Last year, the port team worked 36 out of 52 weekends. "This weekend, while the rest of the base has the Fourth of July off, we'll be working."

Port has three ship movements to work this weekend. A frigate departs tomorrow, a minesweeper departs Saturday, and the USS Grover pulled in to the Rota port June 28 with the assistance of the crew at Port Operations.

USS Inchon departs Monday.

Each ship that comes in or out of Rota requires a minimum of four hours - and sometimes up to six hours - of work to get the ship underway or berthed at one of the base's piers.

The Sailors at Port Operations are responsible for getting all U.S. Navy and U.S. Navy-contracted ships in and out of port safely. That responsibility includes navigating the ships in and out of the harbor, providing line-handlers at the pier and coordinating ship support.

"We take care of the ships when they're in port," said Palma. That support ranges from coordinating trash disposal to arranging any changes in the departure schedule.

"We work pretty much around the clock. Our duty guy is on call 24 hours a day," said Palma. "The guys out here do a lot of work."

In addition, he served as a Naval Aircrewman, and earned both the Enlisted Aviation Warfare Specialty and Enlisted Surface Warfare Specialty qualifications.

An Honor Guard contingent, comprised of VQ-2 personnel, will be sent to perform duties at his funeral scheduled for Saturday in Dayton, Ohio.

VQ-2 is planning a memorial service to be held at 11 a.m., July 9, at the base chapel. Flowers can be sent to Thomas Hall Jordan, 2625 Gilbert Ave., Cincinnati, OH 45206.

Naval Hospital Rota receives 'Outstanding' during recent FDA inspection

Every blood bank in the United States operates under a license from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), who is charged with ensuring blood products are produced in accordance with the highest medical standards. Naval Hospital Rota's blood bank is no exception.

During an intensive inspection last week, an FDA senior inspector examined the hospital's records and procedures. Not a single discrepancy was noted.

During a post-inspection brief with Capt. Ron Black, commanding officer of the Hospital, the inspector said, "Having no discrepancies is a very unusual occurrence. I have done nearly five hundred inspections [of both military and civilian blood banks] and I can count on two hands the number of times this has happened. You have a wonderful department."

"We are a small and relatively isolated blood bank," said CDR Douglas Knittel, the hospital's pathologist and blood bank medical director. "The inspection results are a tribute to the hard work and extraordinary attention to detail our staff exhibits."

Knittel singled out Lt. Richard Hayden, blood bank officer, HM1 Dennis King, quality assurance coordinator and blood bank technicians HM2 Jill Bernier and HM2 Felicia Jackson.

Rota's 625th AMSS Forward Supply Location has won the Air Force's 1998 Daedalian Major General Warren R. Carter Supply Effectiveness Award.

The award recognizes outstanding supply support. Rota's Air Force squadron beat out much larger squadrons at Anderson AFB, Guam; Hickam AFB, Hawaii; Ramstein AB, Germany and Yokota AB, Japan.

The 625th AMSS at Rota received the highest score out all the competing AMC squadrons. The squadron then represented AMC at an Air Force-wide competition and beating squadrons from nine major commands including the Air Combat Command, Air Force Space Command, Pacific Air Forces Command and US Air Forces in Europe command.

area," said Dembicky.

In addition to an increase in population, Dembicky said the rise in break-ins could also be attributed to a decrease in prevention measures. "It's easy to get complacent here," he said. "Take an extra second to think about your stuff. Don't leave things out in plain view."

Dembicky said area crime trends show thieves here are looking for an easy target. "If it's hard to get at they probably will pass it up. The thieves here are looking for an easy snatch. If it's locked down, latched up, whatever, they'll probably move along," he said.

"Also because it's summer, parking is harder to find in Rota," said SM3 Haywood Williams, also a Crime Prevention team member. "People are parking in places they would never normally park in. But they should always park in a well-lit area," he said.

Even though it's hot, people should always roll-up the windows and lock the doors said Dembicky. "If it's unlocked, the thieves are going in," he said. One hot-to-get item for thieves is the base "F" pass. "Keep it out view when you're off base," said Williams.

If something is stolen, whether on or off base, Dembicky said people should report the crime to Security. "We have [Spanish] interpreters available 24 hours a day, seven days a week to help with the local police," he said.

Taking a few precautions, though, can dramatically reduce the chances of become a victim of a theft said Williams. "Don't get complacent, lock things up and don't leave things out in the open," he said.

Base saves $70K through innovative landfill clean-up project

Naval Station Rota's Public Works department and fire department have teamed up to help rid the base landfill of unwanted wood pallets. The fire department is burning the pallets, saving the Navy more than $70K in removal costs.

The project is part of the base's program to close down the landfill and turn the area into a nature conservation area.

The area was used by the base as a construction debris landfill and then became a defacto industrial landfill when commands and departments started dumping scrap metal, file cabinets and other materials there.

"We've closed it and now all construction debris, [scrap metal and wood] has to be taken off base for removal," said Lt. Cmdr. Hector Arellano, operations officer at Public Works.

He said the base decided to clean up the area, place a 'cap' on it - a large amount of fill that completely covers the cleaned-up landfill - and then plant grass and trees on the site in an effort to turn the area into a nature conservation area.

"We've sold most of the scrap metal through a DRMO contract and found that the biggest problem was the wood," he said. "We planned on selling the wood but only some of it was bought."

Public Works recycled the usable pallets at the landfill and still had large amounts of pallets to remove from the site. "A contractor offered to take the wood for $70K," said Arellano.

Not wanting to pay that price, public works teamed up with the fire department and worked out the details for the pallet-burning project.

"It just makes sense. We're doing it so the project is cheaper," said Arellano. "The fire department is saving us a lot of money." The first burning was held in early June and the next burn takes place in mid-July. After the burns are completed, contractors will come in and remove what's left at the landfill. Arellano said the cap project should be funded this year which means work will begin sometime next year.

The Fire Department is scheduled to burn pallets at the construction debris landfill.

Fireworks safety for the Fourth Navy Family Service Center

Donna Pass-Otten

Fireworks can be dangerous and cause serious eye injuries or burns not to mention that the only fireworks authorized on base are those presented by the professionals. Fireworks may be purchased on the economy however, we strongly recommend you not use them.

Approximately 13,000 fireworks victims keep hospitals busy each year. Another depressing fact is that more than half of those injured are children. The fact that 40 percent of all injuries involve bystanders points out just how dangerous they really are. Should you decide to use fireworks purchased locally, employ "Risk Management" to identify and eliminate hazards. You will need to read and follow instructions and warnings, which most likely will be written in other than your native language. (Another reason to not take the chance) Ensure observers are not endangered and NEVER allow children to light or handle fireworks. Risk Management can help ensure a safe and happy holiday.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) instances where legal family-types of fireworks were involved in accidents, the majority of the injuries were from misuse. The CPSC also notes that illegal fireworks continue to be a serious problem. Over the past 10 years, 30-33 percent of the injuries associated with fireworks have typically been caused by illegal explosives or homemade fireworks. Federal safety regulations, combined with an increase in consumer awareness, are making the Fourth of July holiday safer than ever. However, explosive devices like M-80s and M-100s continue to be a problem. Though banned since 1966, these illegal explosives still account for one-third of all Fourth of July injuries in the United States.

The following tips should help make the public display more enjoyable:

- Spectators should obey and respect any safety barriers set. Resist any temptation to get close to the actual firing site. In fact, the best view of the fireworks is from a quarter of a mile or more away.
- Although it rarely happens, it is possible that a firework component might fall to the ground without exploding. Do not touch them. If you happen to find any that have not exploded, you should immediately contact the fire department or security personnel.

Pets have very sensitive ears and the booms and bangs associated with a fireworks display can be quite uncomfortable — particularly to dogs. In fact, the noises can actually hurt their ears. Leave pets at home if you are going to be in the vicinity of the fireworks.

The best advice we can provide is to leave the "Fireworks Show" to the professionals this Fourth of July. Sit back, relax and enjoy the show! Don't make a trip to the hospital emergency room!

CHAPLINE

Featuring
Chaplain (Cmdr.) Beyer

Imagine going to a job interview and on the wall, in big, bold letters is a sign that reads, "The beatings will continue until morale improves." Would you even consider working there? What a way to motivate people!

And yet, you've probably worked at a job where morale was low. No, they didn't beat anyone. That went the way of flogging and keelhauling. But the dynamics were the same. There have always been two schools of thought when it comes to motivating people: the carrot and the stick.

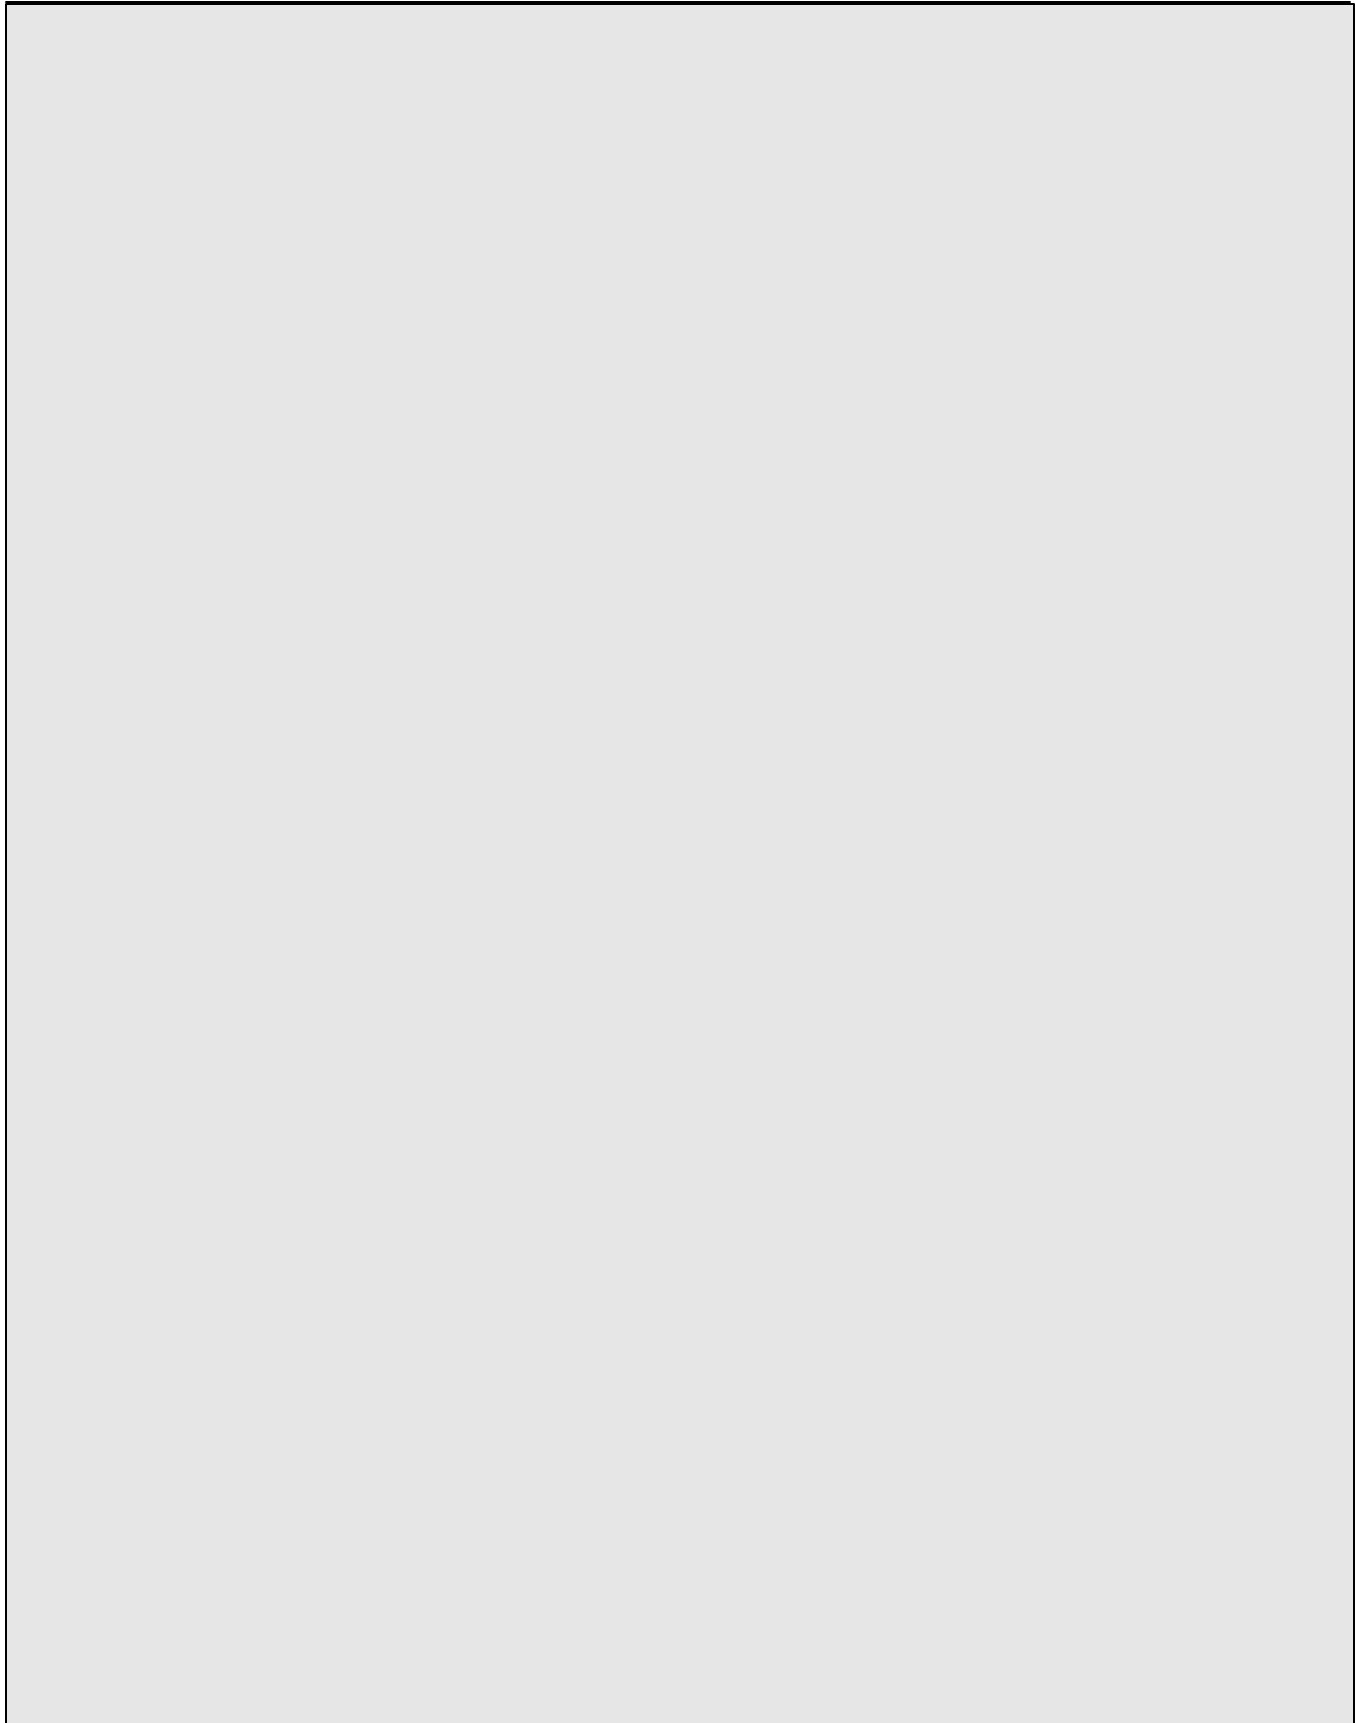

The stick says, "you'll do this or else!" And occasionally the stick is a pretty good motivator. Every now and then a well-placed foot prods us in the right direction. When the Gunny motivates the recruit to hustle over the obstacle. When the parent motivates the child to complete the homework assignment. When the boss motivates the employee to start work on time.

The problem is when its all stick and no carrot.

Most people respond better to praise than to criticism. The stick may get you over an obstacle, but the carrot of praise and encouragement will help you finish the race.

Who needs to be motivated today? Your shipmate, your child, your co-worker, your spouse? How will you do it? Before you haul out the big stick, think about what a few words of praise and encouragement can do. Think about the times when you were in their shoes and you wished that someone would have put the stick away, and led you by their example.

Bravery Trials

THE MAKING OF A SPANISH FIGHTING BULL

La Tienta

CREATING THE FIGHTING BULL

photos and text by JOC Jon McMillan

Today's toro bravo, Spain's legendary fighting bull, is the product of more than 200 years of selective breeding. The bulls are bred specifically for aggressiveness and courage. At the age of two, the animals are tested in bravery trials, called tientas, held on a breeder's fincha, or ranch.

The tienta we went to was held at Fincha Canaleja, located near Alcala de los Gazules, southeast of Medina Sidonia. This is bull country. Large ranches stretch across the landscape and offer day-trip drivers an excellent opportunity to see toros bravos grazing in the fields.

Fincha Canaleja is relatively new to the breeding business. Senor Juan Torres, the ranches' owner has been raising his new brand, Hermanos Torres Gagello, for only seven years. Already though, he is making a name for himself, and his brand of toros bravos. All of his fighting bulls were sold before the beginning of the bullfighting season.

The tientas have a lot to do with that. Ensuring only the best heifers are allowed to breed helps guarantee the fighting bulls will be brave. Torres said that out of 60 or 70 heifers tested, they will keep ten to twelve for breeding. It's during the tienta where that selection is made.

During this tienta, three two-year-old heifers were corralled and one at a time led into a small bullring specifically built for tientas. Inside the bullring waits a horse-mounted picador, a few matadors and an assortment of ranch-hands.

The heifer is put into the ring and is judged by a small group of experienced breeders. The heifer is judged on how many unprovoked attacks it makes at the padded horse and how well it makes passes when one of the matadors fights the animal. The breeders are looking for courage, the directness of her attacks, aggressiveness and general fighting characteristics.

Out of the three heifers tested during this tienta, two of the bulls were classified as brave, the other was dismissed and will not be bred. Sr. Torres said it was very rare to have two heifers classified brave and he was very pleased with the results. Even more pleasing was a phone call the owner received earlier that day from Jaen. Some of his torros bravos were being fought there and he was told they fought very brave.

In addition to the bravery tests, some Spanish tientas are giant social affairs. This tienta was also a celebration of Sr. Torres' Saint's Day. After the bravery trials, guests gathered in a large ranch building and feasted on torro bravo meat, tapas, local wine and cerveza.

The director of this tienta was the Jerez-based matador Manuel "El Estudiante" Rodriguez. A novice matador from San Fernando, Toraro "El Puyita" was there to gain valuable practice. The main picador and mayoral was Domingo Fior.

Fighting bulls from Fincha Canaleja have fought at bullrings in Conil, San Fernando, Cadiz, Malaga and Jaen.

More information on bullfighting and tientas can be found in John Fulton's "Bullfighting" book, available at Rota's American Red Cross office. For an interesting drive through "bull country," take the NIV to Chiclana, then take the C340 to the Medina Sidonia exit, this will put you on C346. Take the C346 to Medina Sidonia and take the C343 down to Vejer. From Vejer, return home via the NIV/N340.

Karen Lucas

Last week the Casino Bahía de Cádiz officially presented their summer activities. This year, to help celebrate their 20th anniversary, the schedule is even fuller than usual. Of special interest are the painting exhibit that consists of the works selected as finalists in their 20th anniversary painting contest, the gastronomic evenings featuring well known restaurants from all over Andalucía, flamenco, a night dedicated to the carnival, another to the bolero and the copla, performance by the Spanish comedy team "Los Morancos" and a big end of summer party on August 28th. All of the gastronomic evenings will consist of "taster's menus" with some of the specialties of the restaurant featured. It sounds real interesting to me so I hope to be able to go to a couple of them. The schedule for July is published separately so you can keep it handy. I'll publish the schedule for August at the end of this month.

We have a new ad this week for Linea Directa or Direct Line insurance company. There is a coupon for you to mail in. There is a Spanish post office on base near the Spanish headquarters for those of you who live on base or for those who find it more convenient than going downtown Puerto or Rota. The post office in Puerto is open long hours from 8:30 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. on Saturdays. It does not close at mid-day.

Trinity School, the language school located near the bull ring in Puerto, will be starting a special beginners Spanish course on July 19th. The course will run for three weeks, twenty hours a week, for a total of sixty hours of instruction. They have a special, special offer for the first three people to sign up. The course will cost these first three people 45,000 pesetas instead of the regular 65,000 pesetas. Don't put it off, you will enjoy yourself so much more if you know some of the language. Remember their office hours are from 10:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. during the summer months and their phone is 956-871926.

A friend of mine recently went back to Pasta Gansa for dinner and she asked me to pass on how much she enjoyed it...a candlelight dinner in an old palace! And the food was excellent, she especially recommends their veal Musala with fetucini.

Congratulations to Helga and Mike of Café Tropical in Fuentebavía! Their first child, a girl they have named Hannah, was born on June 23rd.

This Sunday, July 4th El Paseo Mall will be open for business. It is one of the eight holidays a year that they open.

The running of the bulls in Pamplona (Fiestas de San Fermín) starts this coming Wednesday, July 7th. Spanish TV stations (TVE1 and Antena 3 in years past) broadcast the encierro (running) every morning at 8 a.m. during the week that the fiestas last. Coverage starts a little before 8, but the bulls are let out at 8 sharp and the whole thing takes less than 15 minutes. It is quite exciting to watch so if you get the chance, try to tune in.

Here's hoping everyone has a great 4th of July weekend! Whether you stay here and participate in all the activities on base or if you decide to take advantage of that extra day off and take a trip somewhere, take care and enjoy yourself. P.S. Let's hear from you! Send me your inputs by phone or fax to 956-542997 or e-mail to COASTPUB@santandersupernet.com
